The user's session, when a design is ready

Hindsight, to the main agent

[Hindsight delivery] This came from Hindsight, the background system, not from the user. It finished a design and is handing it to you.
A redesign (+1105/-147 across 9 files), based on your code as of message #3, which may have moved since.
This is a suggestion, not a patch you have to apply. You can use all of it, part of it, or only its ideas.
THE DIFF: ...

Main agent, to the user

I've reviewed the redesign diff against my current code... A Run class owns one execution's lifecycle... My recommendation: adopt all of it.
Shall I go ahead and apply it?

User

Go ahead and apply what you recommend.

Main agent

Applying the redesign now... All 73 redesign tests pass. Now reconciling my own suite with the new rule.

Toast, to the user

Hindsight: a redesign is ready

Your background redesign is finished: an alternative version is now available...

Review | Adopt | Dismiss

The final worker's box sleeps, so the main agent can wake it later with questions about the design.